

TAGEVAC

Evacuation Management system

TagEvac is a revolutionary management system designed to help ensure buildings are adequately evacuated in an emergency. Using the sweep method of evacuation, TagEvac provides a fast and reliable method to checking 'designated' zones within any building or group of buildings are clear following an evacuation, without the need for time consuming roll calls.

Features & Benefits:

- Using simple clearly marked panels, staff and emergency services can instantly identify which areas have been cleared
- Simple and deliberately low tech
- Uses clear color-coded messaging, so you don't have to think in an emergency
- Easy to set up and train staff, with no ongoing maintenance costs

Using the TagEvac:

- Prior to installation, each building must first be split into controllable evacuation zones
- A tag station, containing a removable metal tag, is then placed in a fixed location within that zone. Each zone is colour coded and has a unique reference. The tag control board also contains this zone information
- In an emergency evacuation, a designated fire warden will check each zone to ensure no persons are within the zone.
- Once confident the zone is clear, the fire warden will then remove the TAG from the zone's designated 'TAG Station' and take it to the incident control point
- The Tag is then placed on the central tag control board to indicate that the zone has been checked
- Each zone is colour coded and has a unique reference to help remove any confusion during the evacuation process
- The clear information panels within the Tag control board enables fire wardens/marshals and Fire & Rescue Services to instantly identify which areas of the building have been cleared in 'real time' helping them to prioritise their actions accordingly
